High Mormons Coming
To the Jubilee.

A RECEPTION TOMORROW

President George Q. Cannon and W.
W. Cluff Due From Utah on the Zealandia.

President George Q. Cannon of the Mormon church will arrive in Honolulu today on the steamship Zealandia, accompanied by W. W. Cluff, president of Summit County (Utah) Stake. He will be met by the representatives of the local colony, headed by Elder Samuel E. Woolley, in charge of the affairs of the Mormon church in Hawaii. The venerable churchman has not seen Hawaii for nearly half a century, yet those who know him well say that his knowledge of the Hawaiian language has not diminished by the lapse of years. He spent nearly four years in the Islands when but a young man in his twenties and at that time translated the Book of Mormon into the Hawaiian language.

A formal reception to the President will be held tomorrow morning in the vestry of the Mormon church on Punchbowl street, to which everybody is invited. The reception is merely designed to give converts and any one an opportunity to shake hands with the great leader. Among them will be some of the first converts to the Mormon religion, men and women, who were baptized by the zealous young missionary. Afterwards he will be driven to the home of Abraham Fernandez, Kalihi, where he will make his headquarters during the greater part of his stay in the Islands.

On Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock the Semi-Centennial Jubilee will be inaugurated in the Orpheum theater, which has been rented for Wednesday and Thursday, morning and evening. An elaborate program has been arranged by Elder Woolley, chairman of the committee on arrangements, and Fred Beesley, in charge of the musical program. The Government band will be in attendance. A feature of the celebration will be the choir which has been augmented to seventy-five voices. This will render the anthems and hymns composed by Utahans and sung upon great occasions in the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City. The general program for the morning service is as follows:

Selections by the choir.
Address of welcome by Elder S. E. Woolley.

Native solos by Miss Kailua and Mrs. Alapai, accompanied by the Government band.

Selections by Laie Glee Club and Quintet Club of Honolulu and Mandolin and Guitar club.

Address by President George Q. Cannon.

Anthems by the choir.
Piano solo by Miss Adelaide Fernandez.

Double Quartet, "Utah, We Love Thee."

In the afternoon a monster luau will be given for the Mormon converts and their friends in the drill shed. Donations of fruits, edibles of all kinds and money have been received by the promoters of the feast and all things point to a fine spread. The Government band will be seated on the stage and alternate with the Mandolin, Quintet and Quartet clubs in presenting a musical program. President Cannon will grace the occasion and addresses will be made. President Cannon will speak both in English and native.

In the evening a program of music, addresses and sermons has been arranged for at the Orpheum. One of the features will be a stereopticon lecture. Pictures twelve feet square will be thrown on a canvas showing scenes in Utah, the Temple, Tabernacle, of Great Salt Lake and Pacific Isles. The stereopticon was brought to Honolulu from Salt Lake City by Mr. Silver, a recent addition to the corps of missionaries.

On Thursday morning at 10 o'clock services will again be held in the Orpheum. In the afternoon the president, accompanied by all who care to make the ascent, will go to the summit of Punchbowl, where President Cannon will point out the exact spot where fifty years before he and his brother missionaries erected an altar and dedicated the Islands as a field for Mormon missionary labor. A number of natives were then baptized and a few are expected to be present. Again in the evening the last of the celebration exercises will be held and the bestowal of the president's blessing will be the final event of the jubilee. Between 1,500 and 2,000 Mormons are expected to be present.

Following is the list of chairmen of committees:

Finance and arrangements, Elder Samuel E. Woolley; program and music, Fred Beesley; reception, Wm. M. Waddups; advertising, T. B. Farr; luau, C. C. Bush.

The following interesting statement relative to the jubilee is from the Desert News, Salt Lake City:

President George Q. Cannon will leave next week for the Hawaiian Islands, where he has been delegated by the church to attend the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of Mormon missions in the Islands of the Pacific.

This will not be President Cannon's first visit to Hawaii, for he was one of the little band of missionaries that first carried the gospel of the Latter-day Saints to the inhabitants. In 1850 Mr. Cannon was called from California to start upon a mission to these far-off and, at that time, little known islands. Although the youngest of the party of missionaries, he was principally instrumental in the establishment of successful missions and spreading the gospel among the natives. He became a master of the insular language, translated the "Book of Mormon" into it and spent five years there in missionary work before returning to Salt Lake City.

Prior to his going upon the mission to Hawaii, Mr. Cannon held no official position in the Mormon church. But his successful work among the islanders gave him an established footing and from that time he steadily rose in prominence until now he is second in authority in the church.

HAWAIIAN REMINISCENCES.

When seen yesterday many recollection of his first visit to Hawaii were still fresh in his mind.

"There were ten of us sent out on the first missionary expedition," said Mr. Cannon. "I was the youngest of the party. We had been sent out to establish missions among the whites, but when we reached the Islands we found so few Americans and Europeans there that nearly all the missionaries were discouraged, and I believe all of them would have returned at once had I not urged the carrying on of the work among the natives. As it was, I could persuade only four to remain with me. The remainder returned to America."

"We found the natives a quiet, peaceable people. They lived in great simplicity in their little houses, subsisting almost entirely on vegetable food. A root called taro in some parts and kalo in others was their most important article of diet. I received the gift of speaking in their language and was the first white man to preach to them in their native tongue. They accepted our teachings eagerly, which, by the way, did not include polygamy, and had not other denominations followed, I believe we should soon have had the entire island converted to the Mormon faith."

Mr. Cannon said that the appointment as delegate to the coming celebration had come suddenly and he could not outline the character of the ceremonies. He said he was not now familiar with the details of the recent work among the natives. He was inclined to think that the condition among the islanders was better when he visited them in the early '50s than it is today.

"The Hawaiians," explained Mr. Cannon, "are, like the Indians, a rapidly decreasing race. Contact with civilization is crushing them out of existence and the sailors and adventurers who have drifted out there in the last fifty years have lowered the standard of morality and spread devastating diseases among the natives."

President Cannon was one of the first emigrants to Salt Lake, going there in the first expedition headed by Brigham Young. At a constitutional convention held in Salt Lake City in 1872 he was elected a delegate to present the constitution and memorial to Congress for the admission of Utah Territory into the United States. He was a delegate from Utah to the Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth Congresses, and in the Forty-seventh Congress his election was declared illegal because of his religious beliefs. He is now a very distinguished-looking gentleman, short of stature, with almost silvery white hair, smooth upper lip and close-cropped beard. The San Francisco Call, in an interview with Mr. Cannon, makes an odd mistake by referring to Congressman Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois, the present "watch-dog of the Treasury," as the son of the Mormon leader. "Joe" Cannon is almost as old as the Mormon churchman himself. His son is ex-Senator Frank Cannon of Utah, one of the annexation friends of Hawaii.

President Cannon's reason for coming to Honolulu is twofold, that of being one of the first presidency and of being one of the band of ten elders who first brought the Mormon gospel to Hawaii. President Cannon was a young man at that time and manifested that dauntless perseverance and determination which has placed him among the greatest forces in the church. Nearly all his early companions in the Islands became discouraged and returned but he remained here for five years during which time he translated the Book of Mormon into the native language. His industry was at once recognized by the authorities of the church and he grew rapidly into prominence after returning home.

ELSTON AND ROSS THE CHAMPIONS

Won the Gentlemen's Double and Honors at Tennis
Saturday.

The final in the tennis tournament, gentlemen's doubles class, played last Saturday on the courts of the Pacific Tennis Club, resulted in Messrs. Elston and Ross defeating Messrs. Brock and Adams, 9-7, 7-5, 6-3.

In the final Elston displayed improved form and played a consistent and at times, brilliant game. Brock played best for the losing team.

The first set went to Brock and Adams, who had to play all they knew to win.

The second set was marked by fine volleying on both sides of the court, and Elston and Ross were victorious after a hard-fought battle.

The third and deciding set was taken by Ross and Elston, who played better the longer they kept at it.

After the final had been decided Messrs. Cooke and Atherton took the court to defend their title gained in last year's tournament.

Ross and Elston took the first two sets as follows, 6-4, 6-3.

In these sets the winners outclassed the champions. In the third set the latter awoke to the seriousness of the situation. They played with a vim, and took the third and fourth sets, 6-0, 6-3.

By pluckily sticking to their game and playing for all they were worth, Elston and Ross won the fifth set and the championship. Almost worn out, they held their opponents down to the score of 6-3. They played well, and thoroughly deserved their victory.

The score by sets was 6-4, 6-3, 0-5, 3-6, 6-3.

The game was the best contested of any of the season, and was witnessed by a goodly crowd.
